A three-body force is a force that does not exist in a system of two objects but appears in a three-body system. In general, if the behaviour of a system of more than two objects cannot be described by the two-body interactions between all possible pairs, as a first approximation, the deviation is mainly due to a three-body force. The effects of the three-body force are investigated in the three-nucleon systems. The three-body Faddeev equation is completely solved with a phenomenological three-body force which can reproduce the triton binding energy. The adopted two-body force is the PEST potential (or the Ernst-Shakin-Thaler
